

Sketch Draft

The diary entries for this experiment will contain ideas presented in the same order as the last two experiments. There will be multiple entries instead of one long entry that discusses the idea of interdependence.

Part I: The cat's independence and dependence

- The cat is bored at home because its human is preoccupied with other works or just being plain lazy
- The cat, then, goes out to meet its friends
- It soon finds out that one of his friends has been taken away
- The cat goes back home to find comfort from its human

Part II: An overview of the human's sense of being independent

- The cat records that its human is far too independent
- He refuses help when he needs to and does not accept the fact that he needs other people in life

Part III: The cat's view on being interdependence

- This is a more length diary entry when the cat spends time to write about what it feels is the right balance between being dependent and independent
